

You Might Be A Cid Otaku If...

--You pay the DMV exorbitant amounts of money for a personalized license plate that says "Hiwind"

--Your car has the Tiny Bronco logo, "Highwind" in red spray-paint, and/or a half-naked chick painted on it

--You actually speak in punctuation marks (*&^%$#&!!)

--You have your own flight jacket complete with H/W and Air Master patches and flight goggles, and you wear them EVERYWHERE.

--There is a pack of Lucky Strikes tucked in the headband of said goggles...and you don't even smoke.

--You hum the Highwind theme while cruising down the freeway, 10 or 20 mph over the speed limit.

--People get very nervous around you because you are walking around with a homemade spear.

--You spent a week in traction after trying to do a Hyper Jump off the balcony.

--You've done time for carrying dynamite in your pockets.

--Your girlfriend has to wear a lab coat, glasses, and a green minidress to get your attention...and then you yell at her and ask her where the hell your tea is.

--You spend dozens of hours and tons of money building a model rocket that looks like the Shinra 26, and then you get pissed because it actually flies.

--You tune in to some documentary on the Discovery Channel about airships expecting to see the Highwind and then get pissed because they meant blimps.

--You spend hours sifting through Japanese web pages you can't read hoping to find cool new pics of Cid (women: you spend even longer because you found one pic of a young bishounen Cid and you KNOW there's gotta be more where that came from; I've found five so far and lemme tell you, Cid was HOT when he was 20 or so ^_^;)

--Versus Books has gotten a restraining order against you because of all the nasty letters you sent about them leaving Cid off the poster in their FF7 strategy guide.

--You redraw said poster and add Cid.

--You redraw said poster and add Cid, go to Kinko's and have a bazillion copies made, break into game and book stores after hours, throw away the posters that came with the books, and replace them with yours.